

Mick J 4 hours ago

Jesus was remembered because a mysterious stranger stole the body. One of the apostles thought he was raised from the dead because of this. It was probably one of the dumber ones. This one (dumb) apostle convinced the other 11 that Jesus was risen. The went off preaching. The rest is history. Sure there is good evidence for Jesus, even great

Expand this comment »

Reply ·

Hide replies ^

BunnyMan456 4 hours ago

What would they mean by "the kingdom of God is at hand?"

Reply ·

Mick J 4 hours ago

+BunnyMan456 They say they interacted with God incarnate.

Reply ·

Greg Aitchison 4 hours ago

That's nonsense. The apostles didn't claim a "disappearance" of Jesus' body. They claimed, specifically, his RESURRECTION. They claimed to TOUCH his hands and his side. They claimed to TALK to him, WALK with him, to SEE him eat fish, appear before them, etc. Why would anyone die such gruesome deaths for a stolen body? ESPECIALLY when all they had to do was say, "Maybe Jesus didn't really rise from the dead..." Your explanation is an old, tired one that holds no water.

Show less

Reply · 4

Greg Aitchison 4 hours ago

As philosopher Peter Kreeft says, "The saints proved the resurrection by their words and deeds. They preached a resurrected Christ and they lived a resurrected Christ. They went from fear to faith, despair to confidence, confusion to certitude, and from runaway cowardice to steadfast boldness under the threat of death. They were hated, shunned, persecuted, excommunicated, imprisoned, tortured, exiled, crucified, boiled alive, skinned alive, roasted, beheaded, disemboweled and fed to lions... Yet all they had to do to remain alive was say Jesus didn't rise from the dead."

Show less

Reply · 2