Question: What is your favorite food?

Answer 1:
Dessert.
(Does Not Meet the Standard)

Answer 2:
Dairy Queen.
(Does Not Meet the Standard)

Answer 3:
Dairy Queen Blizzards.
(Does Not Meet the Standard)

Answer 4:
Cookie Jar Blizzards from Dairy Queen.
(Partially Meets the Standard)

Answer 5:
Cookie Jar Blizzards from Dairy Queen. It's a mix of chocolate fudge, Oreos, and chocolate chip cookie dough.
(Meets the Standard)

Answer 6:
Cookie Jar Blizzards from Dairy Queen. It's a mix of chocolate fudge, Oreos, and chocolate chip cookie dough. Chocolate fudge is chocolate that’s liquidy. An Oreo is two chocolate cookies with vanilla cream in between them. The chocolate chip cookie dough is like before chocolate chip cookies before a person puts them in the oven. A blizzard is a bunch of ice cream blended together. A Cookie Jar Blizzard is a bunch of vanilla ice cream blended with the chocolate fudge, Oreos, and chocolate chip cookie dough. When everything is blended everything gets mixed. The vanilla ice cream mixes with the chocolate fudge so it looks almost like chocolate ice cream. Then the Oreos don't look like cookies anymore because they are also blended so they have pretty much turned into crumbs. And the chocolate cookie dough looks like little pieces of cookie dough. With everything all blended up you have a final product of: Vanilla ice cream, fudge, Oreos, and chocolate chip cookie dough. It’s my favorite food.

(Meets the Standard)

*NOTE: Writing a lot does not automatically mean you are exceeding the standard. You can write a WHOLE LOT of very basic things that only partially meet the standard. Conversely you can say a lot LESS but go way deeper and connect way wider and therefore exceed the standard.

Answer 7:
Cookie Jar Blizzards from Dairy Queen. It’s a wonderful mix of rich chocolate fudge, super sweet Oreos, and soft chocolate chip cookie dough.

Two really important tips:
1. Very kindly ask to DOUBLE the amount of Oreos and cookie dough so that you get delicious chunks in every bite.
2. If you aren’t able to eat your blizzard immediately, I would highly suggest either putting it immediately in an ice-packed cooler for the trip home or placing it in your own freezer for about 30 minutes before you begin to eat it. Unfortunately, DQ Blizzards tend to melt quickly and a soupy Cookie Jar Blizzard just isn’t the same as the perfectly chilled version.

(Exceeds the Standard)

Answer 8:
Being a huge sucker for sugar (though I try to limit it to only very special occasions!), my favorite food would have to come from the dessert family. Specifically, my favorite food would have to incorporate two of my loves: Ice cream and candy.

Many companies bring ice cream and candy together, but there are levels of perfection that must be explained:

First, if you’re looking for a lot of ice cream for relatively cheap, a ½ gallon of cookie dough ice cream isn’t a bad place to start. However, your options will be limited and the candy chunks to ice cream ratio won’t be that great.

A step up from grocery store ice cream would be the McDonald’s McFlurry. Another cheap option, McDonald’s serves up a nice, smooth shake with your choice of candy to go with it. The biggest downside, however, is that cookie dough is not one of the mix-in options...

So this brings me to what I believe is the best all-around ice cream plus candy treat you can pretty easily get in the Twin Cities: The Cookie Jar Blizzard from Dairy Queen. It’s a wonderful mix of rich chocolate fudge, super sweet Oreos, and soft chocolate chip cookie dough. If you politely request a double amount of Oreos and cookie dough you will have most certainly struck gold and your life will never be the same.

(Exceeds the Standard)