The Argument from Desire

Every __________, __________ desire we experience can be satisfied on earth… except for __________.

There are 2 main kinds of desire:

NATURAL DESIRES

A. ____________________ →
B. ____________________ →
C. ____________________ →
D. ____________________ →
E. ____________________ →
F. ____________________ →

OBJECTS OF THEIR FULFILLMENT

The world says these things will make you “HAPPY”…

...But only GOD can truly fill the hole in your soul.
“Trying to fill the God-sized hole in our hearts with things other than God is like trying to fill the ___________________ with _______________.”
– Peter Kreeft

If you put your __________________ on you, you’ll be able to quickly see that:

a. We all desire deep, long-lasting __________________

b. We are disappointed when we try to find this deep, long-lasting happiness in something other than ________.

For example:
1. ______________________________________
2. ______________________________________
3. ______________________________________
4. ______________________________________
5. ______________________________________

There are moments in our lives during which we experience a small “taste” of this deep happiness that our hearts long for. People sometimes refer to these moments as experiencing… a little ____________________

Some instances when you might experience a taste of this amazing happiness:

a. ____________________
b. ____________________
c. ____________________
d. ____________________
e. ____________________
f. ____________________

Sadly, all of these moments are only ____________________. They come and they _____.
However, they seem to be clues planted in our hearts that point us beyond this world to something bigger and better: ____________________________

St. Augustine captures the essence of this argument with his most famous quote from the first page of Confessions:

“You have __________ us for Yourself, O Lord, and our ______________ will remain _______________ until they rest in ________.”
