HOMEWORK

The Argument from Desire speaks of how everyone wants to be _____. There are moments in our lives during which we experience a small “taste” of this happiness that our hearts long for. People sometimes refer to these moments as experiencing “_____”.

As I shared in class, some of my “little slice of Heaven moments” include: Playing backyard _____ (at “Aitchison Arena”), running _____, watching _____ movies, reading _____, enjoying relaxing days of _____, working at Camp _____, going on family _____, and experiencing a midnight walk in the snow with my family on _____.

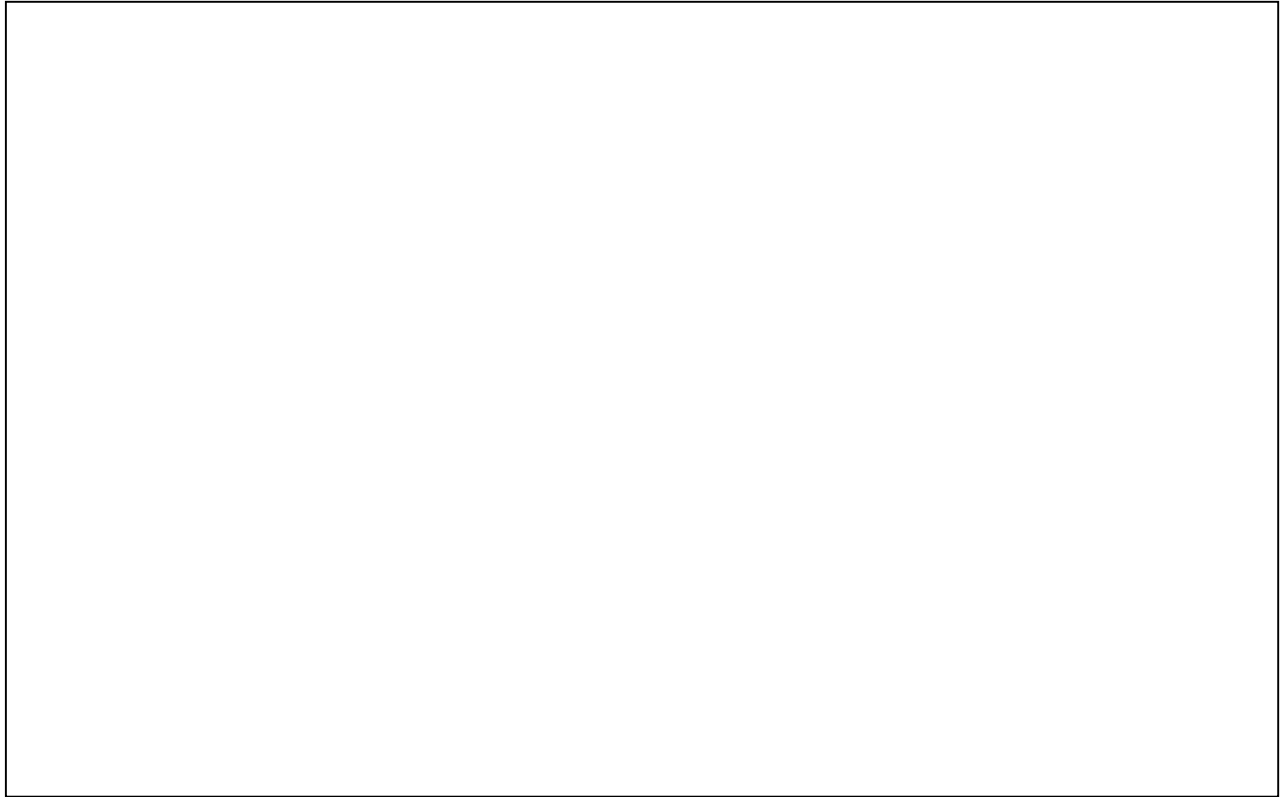

Sadly, all of these moments are only _____. They come and they _____. But, they seem to be important clues planted in our hearts that point us beyond this world to something bigger and better: _____.

So what are some “little slice of Heaven moments” that you’ve experienced that can serve as clues pointing to God?

Note: When sharing your moments please provide details and also describe what it was about them that moved your heart so much. For example, don’t just say, “When I played hockey”. Give more details such as: Hockey with whom/when/where? And: What about playing hockey do you think brought you such deep joy?
