Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People

The Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People is a comprehensive set of procedures originally established by the USCCB in June 2002 for addressing allegations of sexual abuse of minors by Catholic clergy. The Charter also includes guidelines for reconciliation, healing, accountability, and prevention of future acts of abuse. It was revised in 2005, 2011, and 2018.

The Charter directs action in all the following matters:

- Creating a safe environment for children and young people;
- Healing and reconciliation of victims and survivors;
- Making prompt and effective response to allegations;
- Cooperating with civil authorities;
- Disciplining offenders;
- Providing for means of accountability for the future to ensure the problem continues to be effectively dealt with through the Secretariat of Child and Youth Protection and the National Review Board.
More than $4.3 million has been paid by the Archdiocese to assist survivors of child sexual abuse with their healing. This includes counseling assistance offered to survivors by a counselor of their choosing, for as long as it is helpful.

Since 2003, the Archdiocese of Baltimore has trained 292,639 adults who volunteer and/or work with children and young people and 44,000+ students in child abuse prevention and reporting.
"Men of God ... did nothing": Grand jury report rattles 6 Pennsylvania Catholic dioceses

They hid it all," says a grand jury report released Tuesday, claiming that 300 "predator priests" in six Roman Catholic dioceses across Pennsylvania were protected by the church. The two-year investigation uncovered abuses spanning roughly six decades in the dioceses of Allentown, Erie, Greensburg, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh and Scranton that minister to more than 1.7 million Catholics. Many sexual assault survivors wrestle with PTSD, especially if they were young victims and the perpetrator was someone they trusted.
Issues of harassment, abuse, and general misbehavior are not just issues in the Catholic Church. The news industry has shared stories of these issues taking place all over the world and in almost all areas of leadership (sports, business, education, media, etc.). Since this sin is so widespread, what specific things do you think you can do to help keep others and yourself safe in the world?

Keep It Clean: Social Media Screenings Gain in Popularity

By Saige Drive, Social Media Strategist  October 1, 2018 07:23 am EST

What you post on social media could have serious repercussions on your professional life. It could cost you your current job or job opportunities in the future.

According to a 2018 CareerBuilder survey, 70 percent of employers use social media to screen candidates during the hiring process, and about 43 percent of employers use social media to check on current employees.

Managers look at social media accounts for an array of reasons, but many employers want to make sure a candidate will be a good fit with their company.

“Because we tend to view our personal social media accounts as being ‘personal,’ there’s a good chance that by viewing someone’s profile, you’ll get a glimpse into their personality beyond the resume,” said DeeAnn Sims, founder of SPBX.

Social Media Screening

RiskAware’s Social Media Searches combine our research and sophisticated technology to gather social media profile information on your candidate, reported to you in full compliance with law.
